Launch of London Stock Exchange Market Data Licensing Portal

4 October 2022

Dear Customer,

The London Stock Exchange has today launched a new Market Data Licensing Portal, which can be found at <https://marketdata.londonstockexchange.com/>.

The new Market Data Licensing Portal allows customers to efficiently manage any new or additional licensing requirements, as well as to conduct any ongoing contract management.

What does this mean for me?

Any licensing requests or contractual updates which would previously require an Order Form to be populated will now need to be processed through the licensing portal for data content from the London Stock Exchange, TRADEcho and for Turquoise¹.

No immediate action is required for existing customers, unless changes are required to existing licensing, however we would encourage customers to register and familiarise themselves with the Market Data Portal at the earliest opportunity, including whitelisting the aforementioned URL. Any new customers will be required to submit their order through the Market Data Licensing Portal.

Will there be any changes to invoicing?

Licences will continue to be invoiced as they are now until further notice. London Stock Exchange will confirm any changes in writing ahead of any changes.

Introduction of the Data Shop

Customers are also now able to make one-off purchases or subscribe to historical and reference data products on the Data Shop. Browse the Data Shop catalogue now to see a full list of available products.

Additional Information

If you require help or have any questions relating to the Market Data Licensing Portal, you can contact the Market Data team at marketdata@lseg.com.

¹ Turquoise operates a Multilateral Trading Facility (MTF) majority owned by London Stock Exchange Group in partnership with the user community. For more information refer to What is Turquoise? | LSEG
